SUB: EMOTIONAL BOND BETWEEN DIGITAL MEDIUM

Proposed during early stages of Cyber age, this experiment is finally conducted in an effort to have a better understanding in the process of forming emotional bond through text and pictures.

The reaction from the subjects involved in 722-CEROM indicates a tendency to engage on a direct-contact with objects.

Some early-hypothesis estimate a duration of 15.552.000 second required for the subject to stay intact with object(s) before it could get attached to it emotionally.

There are, however some behavioral traits which then could be traced to confirm this 'Bond Forming' phenomenon.

RE: INACTIVE AND UNRESPONSIVE SUBJECTS

They seem to behave normally, but upon contact with a new subject, it triggers their Sleep Switch automatically. Despite written as a usual cycle of 722-CEROM subject's daily life, many subject still attempts to hijack this natural system.

This phenomenon typically goes from a daily in-direct contact, switching texts and picture(s) between each test subjects. In the middle of an observation, a subject suddenly fell silent while the others still unaware of its condition.

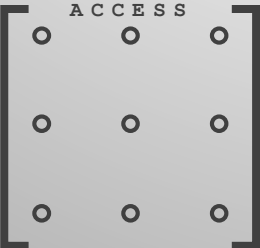

Duration of the subject's inactivity made the majority of other test subjects believe that the observed subject is going through a process known as A.F.K. (Annihilated From Knocked). This term's meaning currently still held a secret from the subject.

As of right now, subjects of 722-CEROM made their own presumptions about what A.F.K. stands for. Their version of A.F.K. means "Away From Keyboard". Although may sounds silly, these subjects has shown a capability of critical thinking.

So far, there hasn't been any attempt to reduce the amount of these hijacking of natural occurrence. The Main Capital doesn't even bother to propose an order of interference for the subject's activity let alone a direct order.
